Corps asking for comments on Shoreline permit plan

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Mobile District office is asking for comments regarding its proposal to begin issuing a special general permit for construction work in Shoreline Park wetland areas.

John Winn, supervisory ecologist of the Corps office, stated recently, "We are asking you (The Sea Coast Echo) and your readers and all local agencies for their opinions."

He noted the Corps already issues a general permit for relatively minor waterfront construction, but the proposed permit provides uniform guidelines primarily for fill work to form house pads or driveways in Shoreline Park.

The reason for establishing another type of general permit is because Shoreline Park is the only subdivision within the Mobile office's jurisdiction (which includes four southeastern states and the Caribbean) in a wetland area where any extensive construction is still underway, Winn revealed.

He explained that most subdivisions were developed before the Corps began prohibiting extensive filling in of wetland areas or requiring permits for waterfront and wetland construction.

Winn said another problem is that real estate agents are not informing clients that permits must be obtained for Shoreline Park construction.

He also explained that the Corps has the authority to regulate construction in wetland areas which are above the mean high tide mark.

The ecologist describes most of Shoreline park as a 'high marsh' area which is above the mean high tide mark, but 'these wetlands impact water qualities' primarily in respect to shellfish reproduction.

"We feel the productivity of these high marsh areas will be lost unless some sort of environmental control is maintained," Winn stated.

He reported that many new Shoreline Park property owners, primarily from Louisiana and not familiar with local laws, begin filling entire lots which is a prohibited activity.

They also begin placing fill for homes and driveways in these high marsh areas without Corps approval, Winn added.

"They don't know it's regulated activity and developers aren't telling them about our regulations," he stated.

He also revealed that Corps inspectors have discovered many Shoreline Park residents, while building their homes and temporarily living in house trailers, are running sewage lines directly into canals.

Winn said the new general permit will also shorten the time for Shoreline Park property owners to receive Corps permission to begin construction from a matter of months to weeks.

The Corps will require in the permits that driveway fill areas not exceed 500 square feet; material be either poured or precast concrete, shell or asphalt paving; location not impair surface drainage; and direction be 'associated' with an existing access road.

Fill for house pads of 'pile-supported structures' in Shoreline wetland areas based on the permit proposal will not be allowed to extend further than a house eave drip line.

Winn stated, "This would provide reasonable access for individual's access to their property."

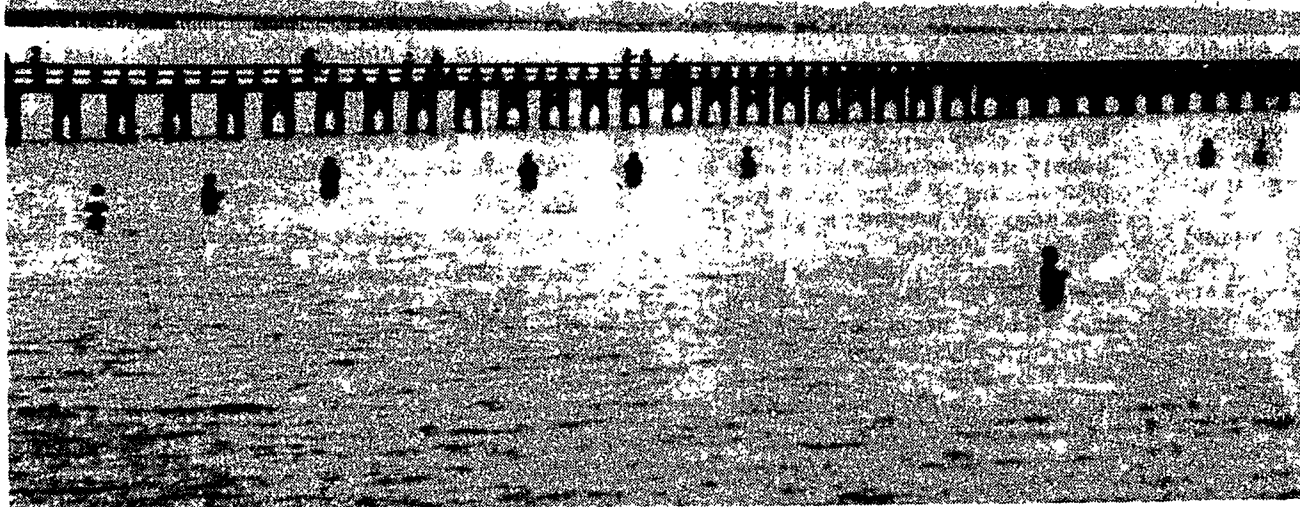

He also explained the Shoreline Park regulations represents an addition to Mississippi's General Permit Program which is modified to meet the needs of the state and public.

The new permit would be issued for a five-year period, Winn reported.

Federal environmental agencies have asked to tour the Shoreline area prior to establishment of the new permit, Winn revealed.

The Corps official speculated the new general permit will be required for new Shoreline Park construction beginning Oct. 1 if no significant objections are filed.

Winn encourages local realtors and citizens to obtain information regarding the proposed permit by contacting him at the Corps Mobile office at P. O. Box 2288, Mobile, Ala. 36628 or telephone 205-690-2584.

SPECKS ARE RUNNING—Numerous local fishermen were wading and fishing from piers in the Bay of St. Louis and the Mississippi Sound at Bay St. Louis and Waveland this week for speckled trout. Anglers caught up to as many as 100 in a single outing, with the most popular bait being the 'sparkle beetle.' This photo was taken Tuesday morning at the Ullman Avenue pier. The trout appeared later this year because of the opening of the Bonnet Carré Spillway during the Spring floods. Flounder fishermen also are doing well with a catch of 96 being gigged by a group using three lights this week. The location was not revealed, just reported as being 'a good floundering spot.' Commission decision on zoning map delayed 'for further study'

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Final acceptance of an updated zoning map of Bay St. Louis presented to the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night by Jules Lagarde, architect, was delayed for further study by the commission.

Members of the commission agreed to meet Thursday, Aug. 18 to study the map and make their final decision.

Controversies on the zoning of Pete Fountain's beach front property, located at the foot of the bridge, has been an ongoing topic of the Bay City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission for several months.

At Tuesday night's PZC meeting approximately 15 concerned owners of beach front property voiced their opinions concerning the updated map and the rezoning.

The majority of the people attending expressed the opinion that they do not want any changes in the zoning for beach front property.

C.C. McDonald, chairman of PZC, told the audience, "In the course of updating the map the board is not setting out to change anything but, to correct any errors, omissions or deletions in regard to the zoning."

McDonald said the map is being updated through research consisting of going back over old maps, and checking through the minutes of the Bay City Council to find out what their intent was, based on prior actions.

He said, "We want to rectify every unintentional error."

McDonald said the commission is basing the corrections on what the council had intended to do and not on the fact that there were errors made such as not signing the minutes.

An unidentified man in the audience asked, "Is that legal?"

Clarence J. Ladner, member of the commission, answered, "Yes, even the supreme court can rule on intent."

The ongoing controversy stems from the fact that in 1972 the city council supposedly granted Pete Fountain a zoning change from R-3 classification to a C-3 classification.

However, James Thriffley, councilman Ward II, stated at a council meeting July 19 that the minutes gran-

Bay St. Louis and Waveland fire departments responded to a structure fire at 347 Main Street, Bay St. Louis, late Wednesday afternoon.

Chief Andrew Lizana said, "The fire was frightening at first because of the thick black smoke coming out of the roof. However, there were no people in the house and firemen had it under control quickly."

"There was nothing in the house but fire when we arrived," said Lizana.

The roof was damaged in two different sections, Lizana added.

Neighbors reported that the house had been unoccupied for about a week. The property was sold in June to Mrs. Louise Brown of Slidell.

Don Coss, sheriff's department, on the scene said, "They did a fantastic job of knocking that fire down."

Other firemen who responded to the fire were, Captain Mike Willumitis, Lt. Alphonse Sheppard, and fire fighters, Terry McCarty, Richard Trudell, Arthur Farve, Gary Maurice, Ronald Collins, Ann Peneguy, and rescue personnel, Guy Lizana and James Varnell, volunteer.

Willumitis said, "This fire proved that the changing of our paging system was a good idea because a lot more fire fighters responded and they responded more quickly."

The paging system has been changed to a portable system in which the fire fighters wear the paging system on their belts, according to Willumitis.

NATIONAL AWARD—Pat Cole Wilson of Pearlinton has received a national award for her poignant, hand-colored photograph of the late Hester Matthews of Vicksburg. The work which will appear in the November issue of 'Photographers' Forum Magazine' and 'Best of Photography Annual, 1983,' was selected from among 14,324 entries. Judges for the magazine's spring contest were Peter Russ from Otis Parson's Art Institute in Brooklyn, N.Y.; Barbara Pearlman, photo instructor at University of California of Los Angeles; and Robert Flick, photo instructor at University of Southern California.

Bay businessman charged as Tennessee fugitive

By ELLIS CUEVAS

A Bay St. Louis businessman using the alias of Glenn Green was captured Wednesday morning, according to Delbert Seay, Hancock County investigator.

Seay said, "Lelon D. Lindsey, 37, using the alias of Glenn Green, who has been a fugitive for three years from federal authorities in the Eastern District of Tennessee was apprehended as he was reporting to his business Wednesday."

"He had been under surveillance for several days as he has been operating the Silent Yesterdays Antiques shop in the Shieldsboro Square Arcade in Bay St. Louis," Seay added.

Lindsey, reportedly has an exhibit of antique canning jars at the Bay St. Louis branch of the Hancock County Library.

Seay stated, "Lindsey, who was on the Gulf Coast over two years, was wanted by federal authorities for bond jumping, on parole for bank robbery, and failure to appear in Federal Court on a counterfeiting charge."

The arrest was made by Seay and a Secret Service Agent, with Lindsey being turned over to federal marshals in Biloxi.

ting a zoning change on the Fountain property was not signed, therefore making it invalid.

Thrillilly said that during the minutes were invalid then Fountain's property would automatically revert back to R-3 classification.

At the same council meeting the council members voted that Fountain's property should revert back to R-3 making it a legality.

A letter from Lagarde to the Bay City Council, dated July 13, asking the council to rescind their decision was read at the meeting.

Thrillilly said, "As far as I am concerned as a city councilman, the matter is settled. It was voted on."

Wilson Weber, commissioner, asked, "What is the legal aspect of city officials not signing an ordinance? I don't see how the city can just side step an issue."

Thrillilly said, "Fountain wants to build 16 to 20 townhouses on his beach property. With an R-3 classification he can do that, I don't know what the problem is here."

"Fountain's project would have to be approved by the Planning Commission, but that has nothing to do with zoning," added Thrillilly.

McDonald said, "I strongly suspect that Fountain will take this issue into court. Then it will be the courts that settle the problem."

McDonald added, "In the overall case we recommend the city go along with the intent when these various actions were taken in case there is any doubt."

Thrillilly said, "I totally disagree with the direction you're going in, you're making a recommendation after the fact. The council has already voted on the Fountain property."

McDonald, "We're trying to make it crystal clear."

Thrillilly, "It is crystal clear."

Joe Marachino, a former commission member and concerned citizen, said, "Back in 1972, the New South Corporation was going to purchase the land that Fountain now owns. Walter James Phillips, attorney for the corporation, went before the council and asked for C-3 zoning."

"The New South Corporation purchased the property for a sizable amount on the basis the city council agreed to zone it C-3."

"Fountain eventually bought the property on the assumption it was zoned C-3," Marachino added.

Thrillilly said, "The signature fact was hidden until Fountain tried to build a fence on the property. When I tried to stop him he said that it was zoned C-3. The city attorney, the mayor and I went back and checked the minutes. We all agreed there was an error."

McDonald then added, "We are just an advisory body. We stated our position and asked the city to realize their decision. The council chose not to."

Lagarde compiled a book of 53 errors or omissions based on prior actions. Fifty-two of the corrections recommendation were accepted by the council at a prior meeting excluding No. 13 which was Fountain's property, leaving it at the R-3 classification.

The map drawn up by Lagarde includes all of these corrections but leaves the Fountain property zoned R-3.

The map will be studied and voted on Thursday, Aug. 13 at the regular meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Biloxi Diocese to offer natural family planning

Instruction on natural family planning will be sponsored by Catholic Social Services of Biloxi.

Representatives of the Couple to Couple League, Douglas and Imelda Touchet of Lafayette, La. will serve as instructors.

The program begins Friday evening Aug. 12 at the Sacred Heart Center in Biloxi at 7 p.m.

To pre-register, call 374-8316.

Natural family planning is used to avoid or achieve pregnancy by observing the wife's fertile and infertile time.

The Touchet's will be teaching the Sympto-Thermal Method, which they claim is 99 percent effective as a method of birth regulation.

With the Sympto-Thermal method, several fertility signs, including temperature, mucus and cervix changes are observed, charted and interpreted.

It assumes that every woman has irregular cycles.

The Touchets have been teaching natural family planning for over five years.

The Couple to Couple League is the largest group teaching natural family planning in the United States.

The League was started in 1971 by John and Sheila Kopley with the help of Ronald A. Prem, MD, head of the department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Minnesota School of Medicine.

24-IN-MEMORIAM

In Loving Memory of Altha Schwartz on her birthday, Aug. 11

God made a wonderful mother, as dear as a mother could be.

We thank God every moment that he gave a dear mother to us.

We have only your love and memory, dear mother, to cherish our whole life through.

But sweetness will linger forever as we cherish the love and memory of you.

So we shed a tear in silence as we breathe a sign of regret.

For you are ours to remember if the whole world should ever forget.

MEET MARIE BUSH

Marie Bush is a physical therapy tech here at Hancock General. She has been with us for the past 10 years, working previously as a nurse's aide before joining the physical therapy department five years ago. Marie and her husband, Jordan, reside in Bay St. Louis with their two children. The physical therapy department is vital to patient care, treating illness and injury through physical means. They use heat, light, water, exercise and electricity to assist patients in recovering from their illness or injury and return to normal lifestyles. The whirlpool baths utilize rapidly moving water to conduct heat, making motion easier and less painful, improving circulation and aiding in relaxation. We think Marie and the other members of the physical therapy department are important to reaching our goal of assuring that the people of the community receive the best in patient and health care. We are Hancock General, your community hospital that cares, and we think it's time you got to know us!

SCREENING ROOM ONLY

By David H. Jones

What to Review What Not to Review

I've been going to the movies for so long that I'm hopelessly, helplessly hooked on the combination of buttered popcorn and orange soda.

And I've been reviewing films for so long that phrases like "tour de force performance," "Accented by the gorgeous cinematography of..." and "presents a small slice of All-American Pie," pop continuously into my head while I'm watching a movie.

And since I do this job part time, I never see all the films showing in town. Rather I rely heavily on advance word, people involved in a film project, reviews and other miscellaneous tidbits from the cinematic world to make my decision on attending a certain film.

Unfair sure, but so are reviews. Everyone's got an opinion, it's just that critics get paper space.

Following are my views on current film offerings in area theaters.

(1) "Return of the Jedi." This makes the third "Star Wars" film in a planned nine-segment series from producer George Lucas.

"Jedi" attempts to answer all of the questions posed by its predecessors, "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back."

Because of this, "Return of the Jedi" is quite wordy and in some instances rather boring, but, in the final analysis, the Ewoks are adorable, Jabba the Hutt rather hideous and the beginning and ending sequences are fast-paced and fun. In all a resounding finale to a fine film idea.

"Return of the Jedi" stars Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher and Harrison Ford.

(2) "Staying Alive" is a sequel to the mega-million dollar hit, "Saturday Night Fever." This time Tony Manero (John Travolta) has left his New Jersey home for Broadway to become a professional dancer.

Director Sylvester Stallone ("Rocky" himself) helped to whip Travolta into excellent shape for this film but the result is a leaden effort which does very little to twist the night away.

(3) "Jaws 3D" stars Academy Award winner Louis Gossett Jr., ("an Officer and a Gentleman") along with Randy Quaid, who was so good in "Breaking Away" and "The Long Riders," and Bess Armstrong, from Alan Alda "Four Seasons" and "High Road to China" in still another remake of Steven Spielberg's terrorizing first adaptation of Peter Benchley's novel (whew!).

The gimmick this time, of course, is the 3D effect which is said to be phenomenal. Still, after you've sweated through the original—with Roy Scheider taking careful aim at the shark and finally pulling the trigger and blowing the big blue fin into smithereens—the hard to get psyched up to see this one, special effects and all.

(4) Speaking of "Breaking Away" (see (3) above), Peter Yates, who directed "Krull," also directed "Breaking Away" as well as the classic, and I mean classic, "Bullitt."

After seeing about two minutes of previews for the new "Krull," I couldn't believe I saw Yates' name associated with this project. It looks to be another science fiction adventure film in the mold of "Star Wars" with some "Excalibur" special effects thrown in for good measure.

Even in his slightly "off" moments, Yates manages to produce something like the entertaining, "The Deep." One can only wonder.

Brown & Root's Pascagoula job cited for safety

Brown & Root, Inc. employees on the Chevron USA, Inc. Pascagoula Refinery Conversion Project have posted seven million hours without a lost time accident.

Brown & Root, a Halliburton company, is one of the world's largest engineering and construction companies.

The safety record was accomplished with 3,577 employees working on the billion dollar project.

Brown & Root is prime contractor, general manager, engineer and constructor on the job which was started in December, 1980 and is scheduled for completion this summer.

Brown & Root President Thomas J. Feehan said, "safety is the most important feature of every job. To achieve it takes the cooperation of every person involved. I am proud of the men and women of this project who have made this possible."

THANKS

Thanks for your vote of confidence in the August 2 primary. I sincerely solicit your continued vote and support on August 23.

To the voters who supported the other candidates in the first primary, I now ask you to consider my experience and qualifications, and re-elect me to serve another term. Sincerely,

Money Talk

I strongly recommend that you try every feature and control on your new appliance soon after it is installed. The appliance warranty is part of the purchase price. To gain full advantage of it, you must "put the appliance through its paces" before the warranty expires. This may involve using a feature more frequently than really necessary during the warranty period, much as a ship undergoes a "shake-down cruise."

If you do find a problem, don't "live with" your defective appliance. Promptly tell your dealer of the problem and give him enough time to correct it. Dealers want satisfied customers who will act as word-of-mouth advertisers.

To protect your warranty coverage, put your complaints to both the dealer and manufacturer in writing and keep copies. Take the following steps:

1. Identify your appliance problem during the warranty period.
2. Contact your dealer and/or manufacturer about the problem during the warranty period.
3. Keep records to help document your case. Note such details as when the problem was first noticed, when it was reported to the dealer and/or manufacturer, and the servicing history (when, by whom, and what was done).

TO THE PEOPLE OF HANCOCK COUNTY

Please accept my thanks to all for the cordial reception you gave me. I enjoyed the campaign very much.

To those of you I may have missed, I apologize. Now I ask all of my supporters to join me and elect my friend, HAROLD J. STIGLET SR.

Isn't It Time We Had Some Good News For A Change?

As our chief law enforcement officer, the District Attorney should be an example of a law-abiding citizen. He should work hard against crime. Avoiding even the appearance of wrongdoing.

The District Attorney should take the lead in criminal investigations — instead of being the subject of investigations himself.

But here's some good news.

On August 2nd, the majority of the voters of Harrison, Hancock and Stone Counties voted to make a change in the District Attorney's office. And that's good news.

It means people are tired of putting up with the cloud of doubt that hangs over the District Attorney's office. It's a bad reflection on all of us. And it's unfair to the rest of our honest, hardworking public officials.

We can trust Cono Caranna.

He served us well in Vietnam. An Infantry company commander, he won three bronze stars for heroism and a Purple Heart for wounds received in action.

As City Attorney, he's tried some of the toughest cases ever presented in court — and won.

Caranna has worked closely with law enforcement for over 10 years. So, as our District Attorney, he'll make sure law enforcement officers will work with the District Attorney's office — instead of having to work around it.

We have to speak up once again.

On Tuesday, August 23rd, let's go to the polls and vote. Let's elect Cono Caranna, District Attorney.

And that'll be some good news... for a change.

A person really gets the itch to fish when he drives a few blocks down the beach and sees about 100 or so fishermen pulling in the speckle trout.

We saw some wading with just their arms and heads above the water, others were knee deep, and still others were high and dry on piers. By the way, it appeared those wading were catching the most.

We have seen a lot of people fishing over the years, but we have to say we have never seen as many fishermen in one spot as we did several times this week.

In addition, fishermen also report catching some big Jack fish off the seawall near Bayou Cadet this week.

We are still receiving reports about persons campaigning too close to the polls on election day.

This goes for the candidates as well as their supporters.

Joseph Benvenuti, chairman of the Hancock County Democratic Executive Committee, in a statement this week reminds the bailiff at each precinct that it is his or her responsibility to see that there is no campaigning within at least 150 feet of the polls.

We hope more attention is paid to the campaigning regulations in the Run-off Election on August 23.

WITHHOLDING TAX REPEAL VOTED BY CONGRESS

It's official.
Both houses of Congress have now voted to repeal the withholding of tax on interest earned from money in a savings account.

That's especially good news because it comes on the heels of two other positive developments over the past couple of weeks:

1. The additional 10 percent tax rate cut which became effective on July 1, leaving more money in the people's pockets; and,

2. Encouraging economic signs that the recovery is taking hold on a national basis with lower inflation, more consumer confidence and more businesses showing higher profits, including the American automobile industry.

The repeal of the withholding tax was part of a legislative package which was approved overwhelmingly by both the House and the Senate. The House vote, for example, was 394-to-18. Other major portions of the bill included the President's proposed Caribbean Basin initiative and mortgage revenue bonds.

The withholding tax was one of the more controversial features of a tax reform package enacted in 1981, the same package which cut income taxes by 25 percent over three years. Congress was flooded with letters, telegrams and phone calls and, on every trip I took to Mississippi, at every town hall meeting and in most barber shops I visited, the repeal of the tax was a popular subject.

Soon after enactment of the law, it became apparent that the measure would have penalized taxpayers who are truthful in reporting their income by subjecting their savings to a withholding tax. They would have lost the use of money their savings had earned.

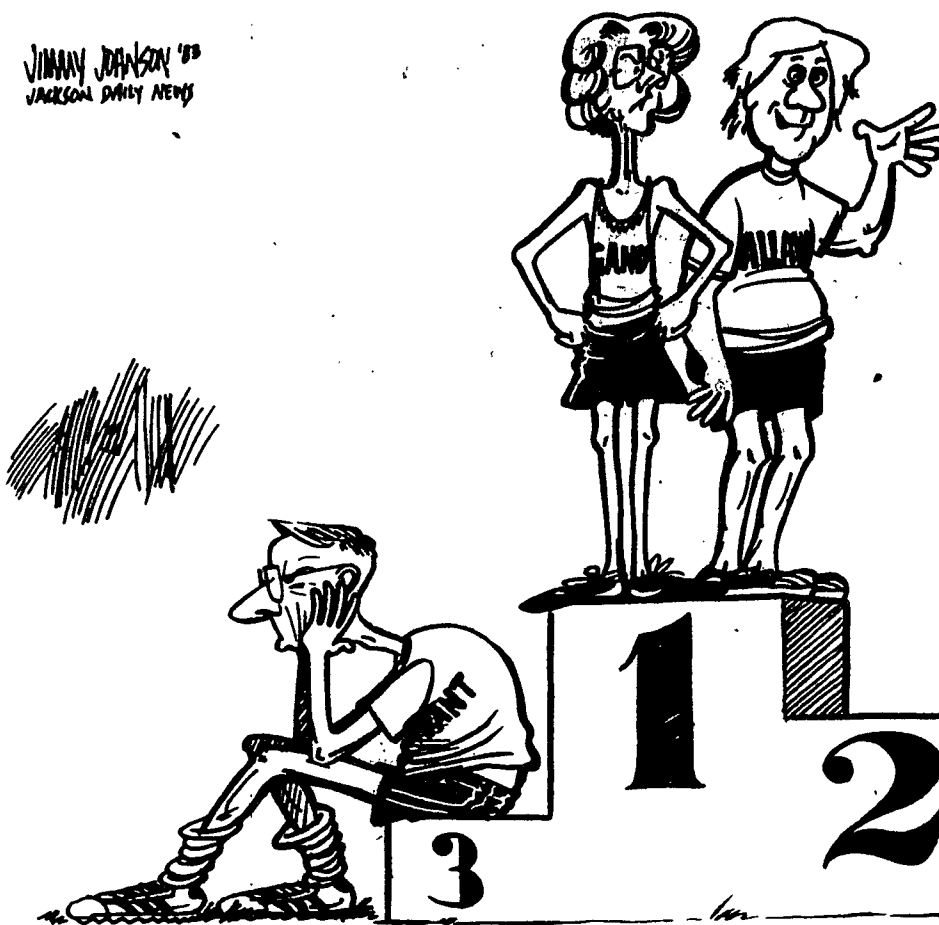

The tax would have been especially hard on low income and elderly persons who would have had to do too much paperwork to claim an exemption from the tax. I introduced the first bill to repeal the tax on January 3, 1983, then joined with a number of other congressmen to bring the issue to a vote.

A strong bi-partisan effort soon emerged to repeal the tax, demonstrating that the Congress can be responsive to the will of the American people. Fortunately, the repeal has now been passed by Congress and, by this time, may have been signed by the President.

The legislation carrying the repeal also included funds to implement a new initiative in the Caribbean Basin, especially Latin American countries, where our interests are often common ones. The bill would foster new relationships in trade and commerce and help forge a period of renewed understanding between Americans from both areas.

The other major part of the package involved mortgage revenue bonds, a useful tool in helping low and moderate income people afford housing. The legislation will help states continue providing funds so that more people can move into their own homes.

Insurance executive reports Echo headline misrepresents Supreme Court ruling

August 3, 1983
Editor
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir:

Your newspaper is a very good one, in the view of this "old newspaperman." I enjoyed reading several successive issues during our just-ended vacation with the Berlon and Nell Dennis family in Diamondhead, and we look forward to subscribing after relocating eventually in Jourdan River Shores where we've acquired a beautiful waterfront home site.

Your Thursday, July 21 edition carried an op-ed column or kindred commentary which I know you'll want answered because its headline inadvertently presented misleading information to your readers.

Headlined, "Supreme Court removes accountability from bureaucracy," the political commentary flayed the recent unanimous (9-0) Supreme Court decision that a federal government department such as the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) or its National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) must document at least as much justification for removing or changing a regulation previously issued as it demonstrated in order to issue that regulation in the first place.

The headline therefore was 180 degrees off — the court actually installed full accountability in the bureaucracy, to replace and in this case prevent hit-skip regulation at the whim of an executive agency head.

Affected businesses, industries and citizens can not operate efficiently, cost-effectively or hardly at all in atmospheres of hit-skip regulatory whims.

This is a very timely landmark court ruling and distinction because numerous other promulgated regulations of automobile safety, pollution and fuel and dollar economy are at risk of premature cancellation or emasculation attempts.

For example, the very worthwhile no-damage bumper requirement has been compromised temporarily to virtual uselessness by DOT/NHTSA on the basis of flimsy, fabricated data and figures produced or cited by the government.

Again, the auto insurance industry has taken the government scam to court and, but for the recent unanimous ruling, probably would have wound up trooping before the Supreme Court once more in search of rescue of the auto insurance buyer.

Thank you and best luck,
Don Costa

Support needed to maintain county's only taxi service

Aug. 8, 1983
To the Editor:

I wonder how many people know that we now have a taxi cab in our area? Or that we might soon lose it?

The Bay Cab Co. (255-3413) might soon close down for lack of business.

I called for the first time last week and learned from Mr. Wallace Cornell, the owner, that his business is so slow, he might not be able to continue his much needed service.

Too often in the past, when I needed a ride, I'd call a friend and pay for her gas.

Calling the cab might be a little bit more expensive, but I'll do it from now on so that it will still be available when I can't find a willing friend and an emergency arises.

Let's keep our means of transportation.

Senator Thad Cochran

Senator Thad Cochran pledged to continue his support of mental health and retardation programs in Mississippi during a recent visit to Brandon.

Cochran toured a mental health center and retardation program serving Rankin, Madison and Simpson counties, and was briefed by administrators and personnel from the three-county area.

"These programs serving the mentally ill and retarded citizens of our state should have the support of all Mississippians," the senator commented.

While visiting the facilities in Brandon and Pearl, Cochran was presented a resolution of appreciation by the association of state mental health centers for his support in Congress.

"You may be assured that I will continue my efforts on your behalf and those needing mental health services," he stated.

Cochran has been instrumental in retaining eligibility for federal nutrition programs for residents of "halfway houses" run by the regional mental health centers.

His visit here was among several stops in Mississippi as Congress observes its annual August recess. Earlier in the week, he visited with citizens in the Prentiss and Jefferson Davis County area, and was at McComb with local and state officials for the announcement of a major new industry in the Pike County area.

Thursday, the senator is scheduled to address a Canton civic club.

WHAT IS CHOLESTEROL?

Cholesterol is a fatty substance found in animal tissue. Primary sources of cholesterol in the American diet are fatty meats, egg yolks, and whole milk dairy products. Cholesterol is essential for certain body processes, but the amount the body manufactures is sufficient for these needs. High levels of cholesterol in the bloodstream are associated with a higher risk of heart disease and stroke. This risk can be reduced by adopting an eating pattern moderate in cholesterol-containing foods and saturated (animal) fats, which can increase the cholesterol level in the blood. News from the Governor

Governor William Winter has announced that the state of Mississippi will participate in the National Main Street Project.

The Main Street Project, administered by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, Washington, D.C., has been highly successful in eleven other states through its program to stimulate economic revitalization of downtown areas within the context of historic preservation.

According to the governor, establishment of the program in the state is due to the cooperative efforts of National Trust president Michael Ainslie, the School of Architecture and Center for Small Town Research and Design, Mississippi State University, and several state agencies, who will co-administer the program.

The agencies—the Research and Development Center, the Department of Economic Development, the Department of Archives and History, the Governor's Office of Community Development, and the Governor's Office of Planning and Policy—will join MSU in contributing time, funds, and services to the program.

Plans for implementing the program in Mississippi came about when Ainslie visited Mississippi to speak to the students in the School of Architecture at MSU and to tour the newly restored state capitol.

During his overnight stay at the Governor's Mansion, Ainslie discussed with Governor Winter the possibilities of a cooperative effort. As a result of meetings held by representatives of the aforementioned agencies, a consortium was arranged.

Coordinator for the Main Street Project will be George Parsons, who has directed the Department of Planning and Policy in the Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs for the past four years. Recipient of a bachelor's degree from Louisiana Tech and a master's degree from Louisiana State University, Parsons was executive director of planning for the cities of Monroe and Shreveport, Louisiana, prior to his term in the Governor's Office.

Participating agencies will share funding for travel and salaries. Office space and clerical support will be provided by MSU's Center for Small Town Research and Design.

Under President James McComas's administration, the Center has assisted small towns continuously since its founding five years ago and brings considerable expertise to implementation of the Main Street Project.

The Research and Development Center, in addition to jointly funding with MSU the coordinator's salary, will generate data and analyze existing conditions to aid planning.

The Department of Archives and History will advise upon and monitor community projects, providing specialists in historic preservation and architectural history, and will contribute to the Project's annual support budget.

The Department of Economic Development will provide services through its divisions of Industrial Development, Marketing, Tourism and through its Small Business Development Program.

The Governor's Office of Community Development will coordinate the Main Street Program with its Community Development Block Grant Program and provide technical assistance and funding.

The Governor's Office of Planning and Policy will provide coordination of agencies and policy development.

Latest statistics show not many shrimp

The latest reports from the National Marine Fisheries Service on shrimp indicate landings at Mississippi ports are running 18 percent below those of a year ago.

Slightly over two million pounds of shrimp were off-loaded at state ports during June. Heavy spring rains and subsequent high river discharge rates, coupled with the emergency opening of the Bonnet Carré Spillway, all contributed to the reduced shrimp populations in Mississippi Sound and adjacent waters.

In Louisiana a large portion of southeast waters closed for inside shrimp trawling at midnight, July 22.

All inside marshes closed due to a significant showing of white shrimp in the interior marshes extending east of South Pass of the Mississippi River to the Mississippi state line, according to a spokesman from the Wildlife and Fisheries Department.

Portions of the Breton and Chandeleur Sounds will remain open for trawling until further notice. Sampling indicated few white shrimp in the sounds, but marketable numbers of brown shrimp.

The portion of southeast Louisiana remaining open until further notice consists of major sections of Breton and Chandeleur Sounds extending generally east of a line running south starting at the Louisiana-Mississippi boundary to the east end of Isle Aux Pitres to Door Point, Brush Island, Martin Island, Mitchell Island, Point Comfort, Point Chico, Grace Point, Mozambique Point, Telegraph Point, and California Point.

Also remaining open are Sable Island Light, Raccoon Point, Coquille Point, Deep Water Point, Northeastern Point of Land at Taylor Pass, Main Pass, North Pass, Pass a Loure, Northeast Pass, Southeast Pass and South Pass, not to include any portion of the interior marsh.

District manager cites years of telephone achievement

August marks the 84th anniversary of the telephone in Bay St. Louis.

"The original exchange was opened on August 19, 1899, bringing 47 new customers into the Bell System," said Don Roberts, district manager, South Central Bell.

On May 19, 1957 the 2,500 customers in Bay St. Louis heard "number please" for the last time and began dialing their own calls when the old manual system was converted to a dial system.

As the exchange continued to grow, technological advancements brought additional conveniences to area residents and businesses.

"On August 12, 1962, Bay St. Louis customers received a service that greatly simplified their long distance calling," said Roberts.

"Prior to this date, all long distance calls had to be placed by an operator. But with the new service, Zero-Plus dialing, customers could, for the first time, dial their own long distance calls, with an operator coming in only briefly to request the caller's number," continued Roberts.

In October of 1977, three new services were introduced to Bay St. Louis customers. First, simplification of their long distance service was carried one step further with the introduction of automatic number identification.

This ended the necessity of an operator interrupting a call to request the caller's number. The ease of TouchTone, or push-button, dialing also became available in October. This made calling faster and more efficient for Bay St. Louis customers than with the old rotary method.

"The latest system in communications technology was also installed in the Bay St. Louis central office in October," said Roberts.

"The Electronic Switching System (ESS) made features available to customers that helped them meet their individual communications needs."

These custom calling features included services such as three way calling, call waiting, call forwarding, and speed calling.

On April 18, 1980, the benefits of the computer age further simplified long distance calling for customers when their calls began to be routed through TSPS (Traffic Service Position System) equipment.

"This equipment made long distance service more accessible by enabling customers to dial virtually all their operator handled calls themselves including person-to-person, collect, calling card, and coin calls," Roberts said.

Today over 7,400 customers in Bay St. Louis continue to receive the benefits of the latest in advanced technology as they move ahead into the Information Age.

An example of this is the measured service option that became available in May of this year.

This option provides a way for customers who make few local calls to reduce their monthly local service cost.

With this feature, they pay only for the number of outgoing local calls they make each month, while at the same time, receiving an unlimited number of incoming calls.

"South Central Bell will continue to provide the type of telecommunications systems that are needed to attract new families and businesses to the area, as well as to meet the continually changing needs of current customers," Roberts concluded.

USING ENERGY TAX CREDITS

QUESTION: In filling out my federal income tax I noticed a section dealing with energy tax credits. I thought this credit was no longer available. If it is still available, how can I use it and how much of my expenditure can be credited? B.D., Natchez

ANSWER: Dear B.D.: Yes, the federal government still offers tax incentives to homeowners willing to invest in energy efficiency. While this program was much more in the news when heating cost and oil prices first showed dramatic increases, homeowners are still taking advantage of the program. The program is fairly simple to understand and requires little effort on your part in qualifying for the tax credit.

The federal government allows a credit of 40 percent of the installation costs on a solar energy system. Note that this is a credit, not a deduction, which means there is a substantial savings for installing such a system. For other energy conservation, the government offers a tax credit of 15 percent of the first $2,000 spent on buying and installing approved energy-saving items.

The list includes: insulation, caulking, weatherstripping, exterior storm and thermal doors and windows, automatic set-back thermostats, replacement burners, automatic flue dampers, furnace ignition systems and meters that monitor the cost of energy use.

A maximum credit of $300 applies to homes built before April 20, 1977. The credit can be taken all in one year or applied to items you install each year through 1985.

For more information, check with your local Internal Revenue Service office. In addition, hardware and building supply firms provide information on this program.

For answers to questions, write Dr. Dennis Tosh, P. O. Box 295, University, MS 38677.

RE-ELECT CARL BANDERET CORONER

CARL BANDERET: Hancock County coroner for the past eight years.

Retired from LAMANA PANNO FALLO Funeral home in New Orleans, La. after serving 6 years. Also served 21 years in Gulfport Veterans Hospital. Being retired, enables me, as I have in the past 8 years, to devote my full and undivided attention and services, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, to the office of coroner to which you the voters have chosen me to serve you for the 2 past terms.

When called to the residence to perform my duty as coroner, I immediately ask the family of the deceased which Funeral Director they would like me to summon. The coroner in this particular part of his service must show no partiality or political persuasion.

I am the first coroner in the State of Mississippi, out of 82 counties to have solved the problem, in case of an emergency, of transport and storing bodies in other counties when autopsies are required by installation of the first county-owned mortuary refrigerator in Mississippi at Hancock General Hospital.

P.S. A Coroner in the State of Mississippi earns $400 a year plus $20 upon each inquest. I thought you would like to know.

Wildlife Heritage receives donation of 32 acres

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Curtis Johnson, president and owner of Mississippi Pumping Service, Inc., received a check for $1 Tuesday morning for the sale of 32 acres of land along the Pearl River.

The $1 check was just a formality in the transfer of land Johnson has donated to the State Wildlife Heritage Committee in South Mississippi for public recreation.

The 32 acres are located along the Pearl River north of I-10 and south of the National Space Technology Laboratories near the old Napoleon Community, the site will be known as The Curtis Johnson Water Park.

A. Dolph Kellar, president, Board of Supervisors, said, "We think it's terrific for the people of Pearlinton. This land was the only access to the river. It's time we had a recreational area with places for picnics, camping, and boat launching."

Kellar also stated that the supervisors are hoping to get some funding for the construction of the park from the Pearl River Basin Development

District, since they are members of that district.

"The Wildlife Heritage Committee will enter into a transfer agreement with the Hancock County Board of Supervisors for management of the park," said William Quisenberry, director.

Dr. Richard Leard, director, Bureau of Marine Resources, said, "Our involvement began when Johnson asked for wetlands use change to actually develop the property. We worked with Johnson, Kellar and the Port and Harbor Authority and it has turned into something where everybody will benefit."

Leard continued, "We're hoping to use some of the Coastal Zone Management funds for the development of the park."

Quisenberry said, "There is one stipulation and that is the land will be a game reserve, no hunting will be allowed."

Johnson said he donated the land to the state because, "I realized there was no access to the Pearl River and this should be a recreational area."

He acquired the property about three years ago to use as a site for unloading barges containing offshore oil drilling wastes. The waste would be taken by truck to one of two disposal pits he operates in Hancock County. Last year, he abandoned the plan and instead leased property in Port Bienville Industrial Park for that purpose.

Also at the transfer of deed meeting, conducted in Lucien M. Gex's law offices in Waveland, was Jody Gex, Wildlife Conservation commissioner; Clyde Davis, president of one of Johnson's companies in Jackson; Mack Cameron, special assistant attorney general; Jerry Mitchell, BMR; and Jane Montz, an interested Pearlinton resident.

Michoud Division participating in Quality Circles organization

"We want to promote quality circles because we believe in them. They help employees and they help companies," says Don Pomraning, president of the board of directors of the newly-formed New Orleans Chapter of the International Association of Quality Circles.

Pomraning, a facilitator for quality circles at Martin Marietta's Michoud Division in eastern New Orleans, helped from the New Orleans IAQC chapter to involve team leaders and members in social and professional affiliation with the IAQC.

Martin Marietta manufactures the external tanks for the Space Shuttle. More than 50 Quality Circles, with 600 employees participating, operate at Martin Marietta's Michoud Division.

In addition to Pomraning, the board of directors consists of Ken Crane, vice president of the IAQC, and employed with National Food Products; George Capton, secretary, and employed with Monsanto; and Norman Abreo, treasurer of the IAQC, employed with National Food Products.

Quality Circles involve small groups of employees who meet once a week during company time. After extensive training, the team identifies improvements in their work area and presents their recommendations to management for approval.

The international association publishes a monthly journal which focuses on research related to quality circles, produces a journal which highlights team projects and team member ideas and supports local chapters. The local New Orleans chapter has held two organizational meetings.

Stennis Airport awarded FAA grant for taxiway

The Department of Transportation through the Federal Aviation Administration Airport Improvement Program has approved a grant for $295,200 for improvements at Stennis International Airport, Bay St. Louis, according to John Perkins, of Senator Thad Cockran's office.

The agency said the work would involve constructing and laying a taxiway and a new apron connection.

The funding is effective for the 1984 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, according to Perkins.

James DeBlanc, director, Port and Harbor Authority said a preapplication was made in 1975 but was tabled because of lack of funds.

City-County Library offering evening needlecraft classes

Evening needlecraft classes are being sponsored by the Hancock County Library System at City-County Library in Bay St. Louis from 7-8:30 p.m. on Aug. 15, 18, 22, 25, 29 and Sept. 1.

Each class will feature a different needlecraft technique taught by Dedi Ballatin.

A $2 donation for each class is requested to help defray costs of thread, needles, and materials used for class projects.

On Monday, Aug. 15, Trapunto, a form of quilting used to highlight designs and pictures, will be taught.

Crewel embroidery and accent stitchery will be the subject of the Thursday, Aug. 18 session.

On Monday, Aug. 22, mounted cross-stitch will be demonstrated.

Needlepoint worked on both plastic and cotton canvas will be covered at the Thursday, Aug. 25 session.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the colonial needlecraft of candlewicking will be taught. Candlewicking utilizes a special thread that is knotted on fabric to form a design.

Chicken scratch will be the subject of the Thursday, Sept. 1 class. This needlecraft is cross stitch applied to gingham fabrics.

Classes will be limited. Interested persons can pre-register for any or all classes by calling 467-5282.

August is best month for quality and price on peas

By Ann O. Rushing
Marketing Specialist

Fresh field peas are a traditional summer vegetable in Mississippi.

Anyone who has picked a bushel of peas on a hot summer day will agree that those who pick-to-sell deserve all they get for their product. If you buy fresh field peas by the bushel from farmers markets, remember that the price you pay is not outrageous in return for growing and picking them.

Shelled and unshelled peas are usually more expensive than canned, frozen or dried ones. To determine whether you'll save money by shelling peas consider this rule: When 3 pounds of fresh unshelled peas cost the same as a pound of fresh shelled or frozen peas, you save very little money by shelling. More specifically, three pounds of good quality unshelled field peas give an average of 1.37 pounds or four cups.

Field peas are harvested from Mississippi gardens and fields from early summer until frost, but the height of field pea season comes in August. Now is the time for best quality and price on field peas. So enjoy them fresh and plan to put some up for use throughout the year.

If you're a gardener, you can hardly afford not to store over-supplies of field peas for later use. Bushel purchases can be money-savers for some people.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) lists the weight of a bushel of fresh field peas as 22 to 24 pounds that should yield seven to eight quarts of shelled peas, or 10 to 11 pounds. In terms of commercially canned peas, they yield of a bushel of fresh peas equals 18 to 22 cans (15-ounce size).

The several varieties of field peas differ in size and color of pod. They also differ in yield with little cream types much higher yielding than other field peas. However, freshness and well-fitted pods are quality signs common to all varieties.

Mature pods of high-quality field peas have a dull luster. Immature peas with shiny or bright green pods are difficult to shell, give low yields, and have poorly developed flavor. Peas shelled from pods that look dull or dry are likely to have less flavor than those shelled from pods with velvety surfaces.

Dry-looking pods indicate peas stayed on the vine too long before they were picked or were held too long after picking. Water-soaked or slick pods indicate flavor loss, if not spoilage.

You can judge flavor of shelled peas, like that of unshelled ones, fairly well by appearance.

THANK YOU

I would like to thank the voters of District 5 for the vote given me in the recent Constable's election.

I would now like to ask you to support Alton (Clay) Sick Jr. for Constable in the Aug. 23 runoff.

Sincere thanks,
RICHARD J. FAYARD

TO THE VOTERS OF DISTRICT ONE

I sincerely thank the voters of District 1 for your strong support on August 2, and solicit your continued support in the August 22 runoff.

I also earnestly solicit all voters who are otherwise uncommitted to join us in the second primary. Together we will win on August 23.

THANK YOU

I had often wondered how that delicious potato-anchovy-cream and butter concoction had been given the unlikely name of "Janson's Temptation" though I had deduced that, with the name Janson and the use of the anchovies and potatoes, it was probably of Swedish origin.

But it was not until a chance conversation with a friend of Swedish descent, whose ancestors had been in that original band who had left Sweden for America, settling at Bishop Hill in Illinois in the 1840's, that I learned the story.

Eric Janson, the prophet and religious reformer, had been a purist in Sweden, even to the extent of burning books and calling for a return to the more rigid and austere days of the Church.

There was so much dissension in the country that King Oscar finally contributed to a fund to help the Jansonists leave Sweden for America.

As in many other settlements, the rigors of pioneer life influenced the early cuisine; so did Janson's rigid views... in fact, he preached rigorous self-denial to his followers — no liquor and a barely life-sustaining diet. As the colonists settled more and more into their new life, many of the early strictures were eased.

However, much of the austerity persisted for years, until the feasts of the area began to reflect the bounty of the rich farmland instead of the privations decreed by the prophet Janson.

Meanwhile, so the story goes, a faithful Jansonist, no doubt after his meager noon-time meal, discovered the prophet feasting in secret on a casserole of anchovies, potatoes, butter and milk...

and the dish became known as "Janson's Temptation".

Still, I wonder, did the prophet share the wondrous concoction? Did he try to keep the discoverer from telling about the dish? History doesn't tell us, but someone wrote down the ingredients somewhere, and so we have:

JANSON'S TEMPTATION
6 medium potatoes
1 medium onion, chopped
2 cups milk
6 Tbsp. butter
2 cans flat anchovy fillets, drained

Dash of pepper
Bread crumbs for topping and coating.

Butter a baking dish or casserole (about two-quart size) and coat sides and bottom with dry bread crumbs. Peel the potatoes and slice paper-thin. Cut anchovies into small pieces (smaller than they are already) and combine with the chopped onion, butter and dash of pepper.

Place a layer of the potatoes in the casserole, then sprinkle half the onion mixture over it. Add a second layer of potatoes and the remainder of the onion mixture, top with the potatoes left over, and pour in the milk. Sprinkle crumbs over and dot with butter.

Bake for about an hour in a 350° oven, or until the potatoes are tender to a fork and the milk is mostly absorbed. Don't add salt, the anchovies are salty enough. (Six servings).

P.S. Don't throw away the oil drained from the anchovies... it makes an excellent "Cheapie Canape"—just top small squares of lightly buttered toast with the oil, and top again with chopped hard-boiled egg.

SPOILED ODORS

It takes patience to get rid of odors caused by spoiled foods in refrigerators and freezers where the electricity was off because of high water, according to Miss Frances Fortenberry, specialist in equipment and housing of the Cooperative Extension Service.

First, after removing the food, wash the freezer or refrigerator with soap and water. Rinse with plain water and dry, using a cloth or sponge.

It may help to wash the freezer with baking soda, using as much as half a cup of baking soda. Again, rinse and wipe dry.

If the odor persists—and it will if it's much of an odor—use a bowl of ammonia and water, one cup per gallon of water. Put the bowl in the cabinet and leave for several hours. Then remove the bowl and wash again with a soda and water solution.

Dry heat may be used to remove the odor. Do not use this method if there is plastic inside the unit. Many refrigerators have plastic that is not removable but few freezers do.

For this heat method, put a small heater such as an old-fashioned toaster or a hair dryer, in the freezer or refrigerator. Let it stay until the inside walls feel warm.

Remove the heat source. Put in a small fan and let it blow until the walls are cool to touch.

Repeat this heating and cooling for several hours. Use the "sniff" test and if the odor is still there do it all over again—and again.

Charcoal placed in the freezer will help absorb any remaining odor.

"Time takes care of most odors if you can wait for them to disappear," Miss Fortenberry added.

Flooded Appliances
For safety and satisfactory service in the future, electrical systems and appliances that are soaked with water during a flood must be given special care.

Here are some suggestions from Miss Fortenberry.

"The whole electrical system should be checked for short circuits by an electrician or other competent person before being turned on. Ask your power supplier for advice and help," she urged.

For any appliance that has an electric motor, remove the motor and take it to an electrical repair shop.

The controls and insulation should be cleaned and dried.

Sealed units on refrigerators and freezers should not be harmed by water, but the controls will need to be reconditioned.

Heating appliances are a similar problem. Disconnect and flush with clean water. Float out water with carbon tetrachloride. The fumes from this material are dangerous if inhaled, so do the job in open air and do not smoke.

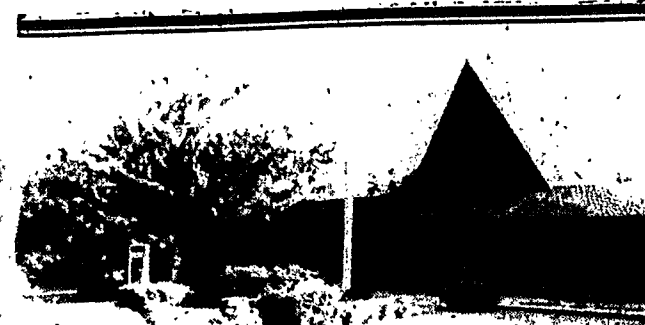

The insulation on hot water heaters will be soaked. Remove all panels and if possible the top of the heater. Give the insulation a chance to dry. Clean and dry thermostat and wiring. Apply rust inhibitor to all metal parts.

Lamp and light fixtures that were submerged need to be completely disassembled and cleaned. Check completely from socket to plug.

Throw away any extension cord that is not in excellent condition. Rubber-covered cords with no cracks in the rubber can probably be reclaimed.

Remove connections from both ends. Peel back the rubber covering until inside braid is dry. Cut off damaged part. Clean plug and receptacle or replace with new ones.

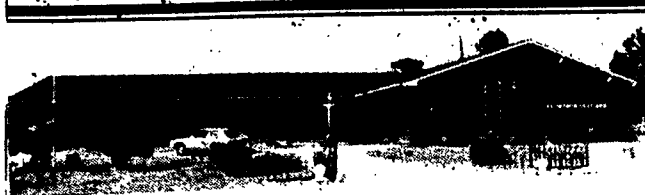

For safety, it is very important to ground all metallic appliances when in use to prevent an electrical shock. This applies especially to such appliances as washers, driers, ranges and waffle irons, and to equipment such as portable drills, saws and grinders.

DRUG PATROL—The newest vessel in the U.S. Coast Guard drug patrol fleet was accepted and named in a recent ceremony at the Bell Halter Shipyard in eastern New Orleans. Named the Petrel (WSES-4), she will join sister ships Sea Hawk and Shearwater, to aid principally in drug interdiction in the lower Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. Surface effect ships (SES) ride on a cushion of air and are capable of high speeds. A total of $14 million was awarded to Bell Halter by USCG for construction of the three SESs, each 110 feet long, 39 feet wide, and capable of traveling in excess of 30 knots.

Democrats list Second Primary poll workers

The Hancock County Democratic Executive Committee has issued its list of precinct managers and bailiffs for the Aug. 23 Second Primary Election.

Joe Benvenuti of Bay St. Louis, committee chairman, said all bailiffs will be responsible for preventing any campaigning within 150 feet of a polling place during voting hours from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

One manager from each precinct will be charged with the responsibility of returning ballot boxes to the Courthouse on election night, he added.

ANSLEY—Velma Ruth Ladner, Sandra Evans and Bessie LaFontaine, managers; Lois Ann Evans, bailiff.

LAKESHORE-1—Iona LaFontaine, Michelle A. Moran and Dorothy O'Farrell, managers; Victor Green Jr., bailiff.

LAKESHORE-2—Pauline V. Necaise, Alberta M. Green and Murdy Ann Shiyou, managers; Brenda Carver, bailiff.

CLERMONT HARBOR—Winnie Carver, Maddona Boos and Mabel Brown, managers; Bridget Carver, bailiff.

ARLINGTON—Janelle Piazza, Mickey Weidman and Billy Dean Perkins, managers; Bonnie Patterson, bailiff.

WAVELAND EAST—No. 1—Alfred Baumgartner, Mabel Baumgartner and Ann Carrio, managers.

No. 2—Louis Carrio, Pere Cabibi and Dena Curvey, managers.

No. 3—David Hubbard, Lauren E. Turcotte and Elizabeth Tait, managers; F.L. Logan, bailiff.

No. 2—Larry Larroux, Lynn Parrish and Addison L. Bounds, managers; Joseph Milazzo, bailiff.

MEMPHIS—Memphis sculptor O. C. Mann has presented a bust of Mississippi author William Faulkner to the University of Mississippi.

Mann, an admirer of Faulkner's work, made the presentation to Dr. James Webb, English professor emeritus and curator of Rowan Oak, Faulkner's home, which is part of the University's Cultural Center.

Mann, an engineer who specializes in geo-techniques and is a member of the National Earthquake Hazard Reduction Commission, sculpts four to six works per year. He has also completed a likeness of entertainer Danny Thomas for the St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis.

He noted that his Faulkner sculpture was designed "to enhance the environment of the Faulkner collections at the University."

"My overriding objective was to create a stylized expression of Faulkner," he said. "This plaster bust is designed for the greatest visual impact since its three-dimensional form is stronger than a photograph or other precise, realistic likeness."

"The heart has its reasons which reason knows nothing of."

Ochsner Hospital developing new headache treatment

Headaches are tricky to treat. Take those which are due to muscle contraction (and a large percentage of them are). Your head might be aching in the forehead area but the pain may be coming from severe contractions of the muscles in the back of your neck—or your jaw.

Leonard Hudzinski, PhD, of the Ochsner Clinic psychiatry department, has spent the last few years trying to unravel the mysteries of muscle contraction headaches.

As director of biofeedback services at Ochsner, he has been trying to get patients to discriminate between which set of muscle contractions is giving them pain.

Then with biofeedback and other muscle relaxing techniques, he teaches them how to control—or even to prevent—such muscle activity.

In about 80 percent of the cases patients have been able to reduce their muscle contraction headache activity both in frequency and intensity.

In an article which recently appeared in "Headache," Journal of the American Association for the Study of Headache, Dr. Hudzinski points out that a "substantial number of patients experience far more neck muscle activity than frontalis (forehead area) activity and could benefit from behavioral techniques applied to that area."

"Most patients can't differentiate where the pain is coming from in the case of muscle contraction headaches. Using a surface electrode electromyogram, the machine we use in teaching them how to relax their muscles in biofeedback, we can test the electrical activity within the muscle and tell how contracted it is."

"Many times we find the muscles in the back of the neck are the real culprit. Then we concentrate on trying to relax those muscles," he explains.

Dr. Hudzinski regards his main function as leading the patient, improving his perception of what he needs to control and then teaching him how to control it. This he does in a once-a-week, one-hour session over a ten week period. But, he emphasizes, "patients are expected to practice the relaxation techniques they learn here at home for at least 30 minutes twice a day."

"The treatments are actually aimed at teaching people how to prevent their headaches from talking hold. If they've done their homework, they become more aware of when their muscles are beginning to contract and can begin to decrease this muscle activity with the methods they've learned," he points out.

The whole problem of where the headache pain is actually coming from has been baffling both patients and physicians for a long time. In the case of oral surgery patients, the pain may begin in the muscles around the face and radiate via the temporal muscle to the head.

"If we find that the pain in these particular patients is due primarily to the muscle contraction in the neck and face, we can, through muscle relaxation techniques, alleviate a great deal of the pain which has, up until now, been thought to relate to the dental problem itself," he adds.

PATRIARCH OF HORROR—Film clips of Lon Chaney in "Phantom of the Opera" are included in the documentary "The Horror of It All" to be rebroadcast at 8 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 13, on the Mississippi ETV Network. It was first seen on ETV last February and takes a close-up look at scary movies.

CAN'T SLEEP?

Researchers are measuring brain waves during sleep. They have found that dreaming has a lot of importance in relation to a good night's sleep. Authorities in the field of Chiropractic have also measured the flow of energy over the nerve network, and have found that irritated nerves cause poor sleep. It has been found that nerves, in some cases, have pressure on them because of a structural problem of the spine; thus creating NERVE INTERFERENCE causing hot, inflamed, irritated nerves which upset adequate functioning of the body sleep control centers in the brain. If you can't sleep—it may be wiser to have a Chiropractic examination rather than a sleeping pill!

Arban expects 78 at PRC workout in shorts today

Pearl River College's Wildcats are expected to report for fall practice by 5 p.m. Thursday.

According to J. C. Arban, the Wildcats' head coach since 1975, 78 players are expected to report for physicals and the first workouts in shorts.

"We have a strong nucleus to build around," Arban said.

"Right now we can field a sophomore team, but I'm expecting to have a few of our freshmen break into the starting lineup by the time of the first game."

Arban and his assistants, Herbert Morris and Leon Akins, said the '83 roster includes 26 sophomores, 24 freshmen signees, 10 second semester transfers and 18 walk-ons.

"We always hold our breath until we see all of them getting physicals," Arban said.

"When we see them that first day, we know for sure they are coming. We just keep our fingers crossed until then."

Last year the Wildcats put together a 6-4 overall ledger and a 3-3 South Division mark. That's after winning the South two years ago and being runner-up in the state.

The Wildcats will have three days (Friday through Sunday) of conditioning before pads will be put on. Monday, Aug. 15, the Wildcats will work out at 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. in full gear. Wildcat press day is set for Saturday morning, Aug. 20, with a full-scale game-like scrimmage planned after the photo and interview session.

Arban will have to have his troops ready by Saturday, Sept. 3 when PRC entertains East Mississippi in the Dobie Holden Stadium in Poplarville.

Eagles 'working out' with media, alumni

The arrival Sunday of first-year candidates for the 1983 team signaled the start of Southern Mississippi's 67th season of intercollegiate football.

Coach Jim Carmody is in second season as head coach of the Golden Eagles.

The '82 Eagles launched his career as a head coach with a 7-4 finish after a gloomy 1-3 start.

Twenty-six scholarship freshmen reported Sunday afternoon and 15 of them have the added advantage of recent all-star competition.

Ten of the '83 signees played in the recent Mississippi High School All-Star game, two participated in Louisiana's game for its prep elite and three in the Alabama all-star tussle.

The Golden Eagle freshmen got in three days of practice before 90-plus veterans came in Wednesday.

The vets include 38 lettermen off the '82 club. Not listed among the returnees is All-America quarterback Reggie Collier, the man who led the Eagles to 25 wins in the '80-81-82 span. He is among 16 lettermen who graduated.

The beginning of two-a-day workouts for all hands is set for Friday, and the players will put on pads for the first time three days later (as permitted by MCAA regulations). Thursday is a non-practice day for the Eagles, but it will be a busy one for all concerned.

Media Day activities will get underway at 10 a.m. in Roberts Stadium and the annual "Meet the Eagles" barbecue sponsored by the Forrester County Chapter of the USM Alumni Association is set for 7 p.m. in Reed Green Coliseum.

For the third consecutive year the Eagles will be preparing for a home opener this one against the University of Richmond Spiders on Sept. 3.

SPORTS MEDICINE

Cleopatra Moran of Kiln was among those participating in a recent sports medicine conference on "The Injured Athlete" at the University of Southern Mississippi.

The conference was an intensive course for physicians, nurses, therapists, coaches, athletic trainers and athletic administrators designed to provide the participant with current methods utilized in the medical field to evaluate and manage common injuries sustained by athletes.

STAR JOINS STAFF

Former Southern Mississippi women's basketball star Shirley Jones of Laurel, who is currently completing requirements for a master's degree, will be working for the University in a dual capacity starting Sept. 1.

The School's all-time scoring leader and half of her time as an assistant in the Sports Information Department and the other half assisting head coach Kay James in varsity basketball. She has been a graduate assistant on the Lady Golden Eagle staff for the past two seasons.

A four-year starter at USM following a standout career at Northeast Jones High School in Laurel, Jones scored 1,025 career points and handed out a school record 335 assists. She also holds the USM record for steals with a total of 336.

EAGLE REUNION

The University of Southern Mississippi has announced plans to honor its 1953 football team at the second home game of the 1983 season.

The date for the "reunion" of the team that posted a 9-2 record 30 years ago is Sept. 17, when the '83 Golden Eagles will host Louisiana Tech in a 7 p.m. game.

An afternoon reception is planned and the former players will be introduced during the game.

Coordinating plans for the players are Bucky McElroy of Monroe, La. and Dick Caldwell of Memphis, Tenn. Further information is available through the University's Alumni Office and Sports Information Office.

OVER THE FIELD—Holding trophies they won in the recent Diamondhead Women's Golf Association Over 50 Tournament as winners over the field in the event are, from left, Betty Boudreaux of Diamondhead for closest to pin; Rosa Gurganus of Biloxi for low gross; Bonnie Rolfs of Picayune and Lina Meyers of Hattiesburg, La., both for closest to pin; Laura Hastings of New Orleans for low net; and Eddie Figures of Slidell for closest to pin. Matters of Health

BEST EXERCISE

Is a muscle conditioning or "body building" program the best form of exercise for good health?

By itself, muscle conditioning is not essential to good health, but when it's combined with an aerobic exercise program, the two can provide an excellent way to keep fit.

Muscle conditioning and aerobic exercises together improve the blood supply to the extremities and tone the muscles. That means exercise at a higher level of efficiency with less likelihood of injury to muscles and the surrounding joint.

What is the value of each program?

Healthy muscles are important to a sense of well-being and to good posture, graceful walking and other movements.

Strong muscles protect the bones, joints and contents of the abdomen against injury.

Body building develops this strength through a range of motions.

Aerobic exercise is necessary for cardiovascular conditioning. It involves exercising strenuously enough to cause the heart to beat at 75 to 85 percent of its maximum rate.

To achieve this, exercise vigorously at least four times a week - 20 to 30 minutes each time.

Aerobics include jogging, swimming, bicycling or, for the older person, brisk walking.

Before undertaking either an aerobic exercise or muscle conditioning program, it may be wise to see a doctor.

If one is over 40 and planning to begin a strenuous exercise program, he should have a thorough examination by a physician.

Starting even a body building program may call for a checkup.

For specific joint problems, the doctor may suggest certain modifications in the program.

—Don't substitute muscle conditioning for aerobic exercise. That's the biggest mistake that people over 40 make - especially men.

Endangered species awareness programs planned at new Marine Education Center

There has been much concern in recent years that human activities such as land development and pesticide use have been accelerating the extinction of many species of plants and animals in the United States.

Over 500 species or subspecies have disappeared during the past 350 years—50 times the natural extinction rate.

Juanita Ferguson and Kevin Howe, marine education specialists at the Gulf Coast

Research Laboratory's J.L. Scott Marine Education Center, believe that thoughtful planning is called for in order to save Mississippi's 32 endangered and 5 threatened species of wildlife from a similar fate.

There are presently no endangered plants in the state, although 250 species are considered of special concern.

"Human activities can be detrimental to endangered species, but they can also be beneficial," Howe said. "We have the laws and the intelligence to save many species. It all boils down to our becoming aware of harmful practices and their alternatives, choosing least harmful alternatives, and reaching compromises. It can be done."

He cited the recent "comeback" of the alligator in Louisiana as an example. It was once close to extinction throughout the south, but because of a temporary hunting ban, the alligator is now populous enough to be hunted profitably again.

The alligator remains endangered in Mississippi along with four species of snakes, six turtles (five of them sea turtles), seven birds, six fish (four more may soon be added to state and federal lists), and four land mammals, plus all marine mammals.

The major threat to all of these animals, Ferguson and Howe maintain, is habitat alteration resulting from land and resource development projects.

"Most plants and animals have very specific habitat requirements," said Mrs. Ferguson. "One can't put fish in any kind of water and birds in any kind of trees and expect them to thrive. These are very fragile and highly structured environments requiring a certain balance; activities such as land clearing, stream channelization and logging practices upset this balance."

Logging practices in the Southeast have taken an especially heavy toll, having already caused the apparent extinction of one species—the ivory-billed woodpecker—and having contributed to the depletion of several others, most notably the bald eagle, sandhill crane, red-cockaded woodpecker, and the black pine and Eastern indigo snakes.

Changes in forestry management have helped diminish the devastating effects of logging, but other habitat-altering practices, particularly pesticide use, continue to be a problem.

Scientists have found that some pesticides cause the shells of birds' eggs to be very thin, resulting in breakage during incubation. Also pesticides are carried by runoff into lakes and streams, thus presenting a potentially serious threat to aquatic organisms.

The most-publicized of these pesticides, DDT, was banned in 1975. Since then, Mrs. Ferguson noted, the brown pelican has been making a comeback.

Gopher tortoise and rattlesnake hunting is a major threat to two endangered snakes, the black pine and the Eastern indigo. These reptiles inhabit abandoned tortoise burrows and are often mistakenly killed by the gasoline or automobile exhaust fumes commonly used to flush out tortoises and rattlesnakes.

"Here is a case where the human pursuit of a single species actually affects a number of species," Howe said.

Both Ferguson and Howe conclude that the best method of combating these and other forms of wildlife abuse lies in education, and they plan to implement several endangered species awareness programs at the new GCRL Marine Education Center.

"Progress has already been made through the passage of wildlife protection laws, establishment of wildlife refuges, and alteration of forestry management," Howe noted. "However, it is very important that the public becomes aware of the reasons behind these actions and there are several."

Besides possessing aesthetic and economic values, our endangered species serve a crucial biological function," he emphasized. "All species are building blocks in a pyramid called an ecosystem."

Loss of a single building block may cause the entire structure to weaken or even collapse. And once it's gone, it's gone forever."

Mississippi parks provide summer fun

Many vacation opportunities are provided by Mississippi's state parks, and they provide a wide range of economical summer fun, according to the Governor's Service Line.

Bicycle rentals, boat launching facilities, camping, canoe and boat rentals, fishing facilities, activity buildings, laundry facilities, miniature golf, nature trails, motels, picnic areas, playground equipment, athletic playing fields, restaurants, swimming facilities, tennis courts, vacation cabins and water skiing facilities are available at many of the parks.

"Many of us are conditioned to believe that a person or a family must travel long distances for a great vacation," said Checky Herrington of the Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs. "Yet, sometimes the best of everything we want is very close to our homes."

"The money that can be saved on travel, lodging and items such as food and admissions," Herrington said, "can be very significant, particularly for a large family."

Information on Mississippi state parks, as well as other state services, may be obtained by dialing the Governor's Service Line toll-free number, 1-800-222-7622.

FOOD AND FITNESS—Governor William F. Winter signs a proclamation endorsing the Food and Fitness Program for the State of Mississippi. The purpose of the USDA Food and Fitness Program is to emphasize the importance of food and agriculture in the fitness of our society. Participating in the proclamation ceremony are, from left, Al Service, State Welfare Department; James Salter, Food and Nutrition Service; Hugh McWilliams, Statistical Reporting Service; Tom M. Barron, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service; Frank Finlon, Forest Service; Governor Winter, Jimmy P. Johnson, Cooperative Extension Service; Tom Benton, Soil Conservation Service; Jim Buck Ross, Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce; and Robert Noel, Farmers Home Administration.

STRENGTHENING THE MUSCLES—Pedro Moreno, left, recently became both Petal High School's and Mississippi's first high school athletic trainer. He is a recent graduate of the University of Southern Mississippi's Athletic Administration and Coaching Department. Pictured with Pedro are, seated, Richard Byrd, a former tackle for PHS, and Rodney Stokes, former head of Petal High School's Athletic Department.

Petal High fills athletic trainer slot

The University of Southern Mississippi's Athletic Administration and Coaching Department in cooperation with the Petal High School system has filled the first high school athletic training position in the state.

Pedro Moreno of Leakeville graduated from USM with a degree in athletic administration and coaching in 1983 after interning his senior year at Petal High School.

He also obtained a degree in biology and general science and will be teaching full time at PHS beginning this fall.

His responsibilities as a trainer include the prevention of athletic injuries in all the school sports, recognition and evaluation of athletic injuries, providing emergency care and directing injured athletes to medical services and providing rehabilitation.

He will also be responsible for organizing and administering an athletic training service within the school and providing healthy education and fitness counseling for the athlete.

Hiring an athletic trainer for the school system may be a first in the state, but James Gallaspy, assistant professor of athletic administration and coaching at USM feels that Petal High School has taken a big step that will hopefully be followed by many more schools.

"Petal has a progressive school system," said Gallaspy. "They've come a long way in just the past eight or nine years." With hiring Moreno as a trainer, Gallaspy said it will take a lot of responsibility off the coaches and ease some of the worried minds of the parents.

USM is the only University in the state to offer a major emphasis in athletic training, and the Department's requirements are stringent with some of the same courses required in a pre-med program.

Moreno works closely with Dr. Billy James, the team doctor, and says it is helpful since the doctor can't always attend the practices and games.

An athletic trainer has the knowledge of not only sprains and pulled muscles, but even the skull, neck and spinal injuries that may occur.

Rodney Stokes, former head of Petal High School's Athletic Department, said that he hopes the hiring of an athletic trainer will not only instigate other high schools to take the same step, but that in the near future he also hopes it will be required by law in Mississippi.

There are already several states that require high school athletic trainers to be a part of the school system, and Stokes said that he feels that within five to 10 years, Mississippi high schools will also be required to hire trainers for their sports programs.

"The superintendent (H.R. Nobles), the administration and parents are all very much in favor of having an athletic trainer," said Stokes, "and we definitely couldn't have done it without their support."

Moreno says he is looking forward to working at PHS and hopes he can set an example for other high schools to follow. Stokes said Moreno's work has already paid off for their football team.

"One of our tackles, Randy Byrd, pulled a ham string last year and could have been out for the rest of the season," said Stokes, "but with Moreno's help, he was back within two weeks and even made All-Conference."

Moreno will be taking his certification test in January which will give him a national certification from the National Athletic Training Association.

SEARCH FOR OXYGEN

Fishermen, stop waiting your time! Instead of looking for fish, try searching for oxygen instead. Once you find the correct amount, chances are better than ever that you'll find fish.

Lake anglers are faced with a tough challenge. In almost any reservoir, 50 percent of the water doesn't have enough free oxygen to support fish life. And about half of the remainder will have less than desirable oxygen content and will serve only as temporary habitat for fish.

Oxygen in water is measured in parts per million (ppm). Research has shown that where there is less than 2 ppm, fish will stay only a few seconds. When the oxygen content is from 2 to 5 ppm, tests indicate that fish will remain up to 10 minutes. The ideal range, according to Mercury outboards' fishing experts, is from 5 to 13 ppm. At this level fish have access to enough oxygen to sustain them indefinitely.

You can locate the ideal oxygen (5 to 13 ppm) by testing various water depths with an oxygen meter. These compact, battery operated instruments consist of a probe on a graduated cable which is linked to a meter that indicates the amount of free oxygen in the water. You set the meter for 8 1/2 ppm (atmospheric oxygen level), release the probe and let it down into the water.

Corps to construct protection dune on Grand Isle, La.

Construction of a Grand Isle beach erosion and hurricane protection sand dune will start in the near future, according to Colonel Robert C. Lee of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, New Orleans District.

Award of an $8,288,000 contract has been made to T.L. James and Co., Inc. of Ruston, La.

According to Colonel Lee, the vegetated dune will offer protection against waves driven by a hurricane having the return frequency of once every 50 years.

The dune will be about 7.6 miles long, 11.5 feet above mean sea level (m.s.l.) high, and will front the Gulf side of the island. It will extend out into the Gulf for 200 to 550 feet, depending upon the underwater ground contour. On the landside it will average about 50 feet wide from mid-crown to its landward edge.

The dune will be constructed of 2.87-million cubic yards of hydraulic fill taken from a borrow area located 3,000 feet offshore at mid-island.

A jetty to stabilize the western end of the island at Caminada Pass was constructed by the State of Louisiana as part of its contribution to the project.

The dune will rise from the Gulf bottom at a slope of one vertical foot for every 33 horizontal feet, up to elevation 8.5 feet m.s.l.

From there to 11.5 feet elevation, m.s.l., it will rise one foot for every five. Land-side the slope will also be one foot for every five.

The dune will be carefully planted with nursery-raised seashore plants, bitter panicum and sea oats, after fertilization. At regular intervals 25 elevated timber walkovers, each six feet wide, will cross the dune to permit pedestrian access to the Gulf. The town of Grand Isle will remove structures located in the right-of-way before construction starts.

The dune is scheduled for completion by December 1984.

The Federal authority to construct hurricane protection at Grand Isle was introduced as a resolution into the House of Representatives public works committee by the late Congressman Hale Boggs.

Award of the contract followed formal advertisement and reception of bids. There were seven bidders.

Bass fishing action hot as the weather

The weather was scorching hot when the Ole Miss Division of the Red Man Tournament Trail fished Ferguson Lake near Greenville July 24, but so was the fishing. And Pete Herman's action was a little hotter than the rest of the pack.

Herman, 33, a forester at Anderson-Tully Wildlife Management Area, put together a limit string of seven bass weighing 18 pounds, 11 ounces to nab the first-place prize of $1,000 cash.

Herman left Ferguson for the connecting Mississippi River. He ran as far as 20 miles north, working sand bars along the way. He culled a limit of seven bass by casting a chartreuse/black back Bagley DB3 Balsa B crankbait and a black-on-black Arkie jig/Uncle Josh pork frog combination to the bars.

Under a clear sky with temperatures topping 100 degrees, limits of fish were surprisingly common, with 18 being scored. Of the 73 entrants, 69 of them boated at least one keeper bass.

Another angler who culled to a seven-fish limit was Bob Hamilton, Brandon, Miss. Hamilton went to the scales with 16-13, good for second-place money of $539. He added the $280 big bass pot to his winnings with the largest fish of the tournament, a 5-8 largemouth.

Hamilton took his fish in Ferguson around docks and barge wrecks on three lures—a Norman Little N crankbait in rainbow-trout color, a chartreuse Bagley DB3 and plastic worms.

Third was Carl Bailey, West Memphis, Ark., who landed a limit weighing 16-6 and won $382. He made a 63-mile run north on the river to a spring hole where he took his limit in two feet of water on black and green worms.

Jimmy Moore, Cleveland, Miss., was fourth with a limit weighing 15-3. He earned $280 for the catch. Fifth was Jimmy Mullins, Paragould, Ark., who landed a seven-fish limit weighing 14-5. His fish earned him $225.

The purse for the Ferguson fish-off, the fifth of six on the 1983 slate for the Ole Miss Division, was $2,737.

The Red Man Tournament Trail, geared for "working man" bass anglers, consists of 10 divisions. Each division features six $50-entry-fee, one-day contests. Rewards are significant due to a 100% return of entry money in the form of cash prizes along the trail.

Purses are guaranteed by supporting sponsors Ryobi America Corp., Humminbird by Technic, Mann's Bait Co. and Stroh Brewery Co. A $1,000 minimum winner's prize is guaranteed at each event.

The angler who scores the most points in each division earns $1,000 from OMC—$500 from Evinrude motors, $500 from Johnson outboards—at the end of the season.

The top 24 anglers in each division qualify for the Red Man All American Bass Championship Oct. 18-22 on Kentucky Lake/Lake Barkley in western Kentucky. This no-entry-fee, high-stakes contest will feature a purse including more than $125,000 in cash, 10 Ranger bass boats and, for the big bass award, a 150hp Mercury Black Max outboard motor. The top prize will be a stunning $50,000 in cash.

Red Man tournaments are staged by professional crews from Operation Bass, the organization of which all competitors are members. More information on the Red Man Tournament Trail is available from Operation Bass, Rt. 2, Box 74B, Gilbertsville, KY, telephone (502) 362-4880.

FISHIN' TIPS

from... Tom Mann

BRER TOM: When I'm trolling and catch a fish I have a hard time trying to guess how much line I had out. Do you know a good way to tell?—Troller Tim HELLO TIM: Yes, do this. Keep handy one of the felt tip, waterproof markers and the minute you hook a fish just mark your line right in front of the reel. When you pay out line again, stop when the mark appears.

DEAR TOM: When using lead sinkers for the first time in clear water I believe their brightness spoils fish. What can I do?—George Circle

HEY GAWGE: Use the same felt tip pen I mentioned above for marking line. It also will quickly blacken the brightness of new slip sinkers.

DEAR MISTER MANN: I haul my boat and fishing gear in the rear of my pickup truck and my reels get awful dusty. I know this isn't good for them. Any thoughts?—Farmer Fred

HELLO FRITZ: You betcha. Just stick each reel and rod handle inside a plastic bag and close it with a rubber band.

Perk to offer 18-wheeler driving course

A program which trains persons in eighteen-wheeler driving, operation and maintenance will be taught at Gulf Coast Junior College's Perkins Campus this fall. B. J. Scarbrough, dean of vocational instruction, said the course will be 12 weeks in length. It will meet six hours a day, five days a week. "Classroom instruction will cover approximately 40 topics of trucking progressions, and include 'over-the-road' experience in driving," say Scarbrough.

There are specific requirements for the course. Scarbrough explains, "Students must be at least 23 years of age and have completed the 10th grade, must have valid Mississippi drivers license and commercial driving license, and may not have received more than three traffic violations within the past three years. Upon acceptance to the program, the student must be able to pass the Department of Transportation physical." UNUSUAL ANIMALS

Llamas, ostriches and zebras are some of the more familiar animals bred by a 24-year-old Tishomingo County man who resides — and raises his animals — at his grandparents' home, where peacocks and deer can be found roaming the grounds freely. Some of the lesser-known animals he has are emus (swift-running Australian birds), toucans (like the bird in the Fruit Loops ads) and marmosets (South and Central American monkeys).

Larry Fish and his animals from around the world are subjects of a "Farmweek" story to be broadcast at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Aug. 15, on Mississippi ETV. Fisk's business has proven quite profitable — among his customers are zokeepers, people who either want to raise exotic animals themselves or simply want unusual pets, and knitters and weavers, who prize llama wool enough to pay $2.50 an ounce for it.

Included on each "Farmweek" program are news and market reports, a calendar of upcoming events, production tips for farmers and weather forecasts for the upcoming week. The series is co-produced by Mississippi ETV and the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Board president to speak at Ole Miss commencement

Dr. John R. Lovelace of Batesville, president of the Board of Trustees, Institutions of Higher Learning, will deliver the Aug. 13 commencement address at Mississippi State University.

Approximately 715 students are scheduled to receive degrees at the 4 p.m. ceremony in Humphrey Coliseum. Four Air Force ROTC cadets will be commissioned second lieutenants following the presentation of diplomas.

A reception for graduates and their families will be given by MSU President and Mrs. James D. McComas from 1-2:30 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

Lovelace received his bachelor's degree from Mississippi State University, his medical certificate from the University of Mississippi, and his M.D. degree from Harvard University. He practices general surgery.

He is past president of the Mississippi chapter of the American College of Surgeons, and is a former member of the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi State Medical Association and of the State Board of Health.

Lovelace represents the Second Congressional District on the College Board. His term expires in 1988.

Federal grant to aid handicapped children

The State Department of Education has received a federal grant of $629,600 for Fiscal Year 1984, to be used in accordance with Public Law 89-313.

The grant money is for the education of handicapped children who are or have been in state-operated educational programs.

BEETHOVEN

The Emerson String Quartet performs two Beethoven selections in a concert from its "In Residence" series at 8 p.m., Monday, Aug. 15, on the Mississippi ETV Network. The concert was taped in January 1983 before an audience at the Grand Salon of the Smithsonian Institution's Renwick Gallery.

Education Dr. Charles Holladay says the grant provides about $460 per child counted on Oct. 1, 1982. The grant became effective July 1, 1983.

Holladay says universities, state and local schools will use this money for various items.

"They'll use some to pay personnel, to contract for certain specialized services such as physical therapy and to buy equipment, materials and supplies as specified in their individual projects."

Dr. Walter Moore, assistant director of instruction in charge of special education, says some agencies and local school districts have already submitted applications for projects. He says approximately 100 school districts and 15 programs in universities and state agencies are eligible for Fiscal Year 1984 P.O. 89-313 funds.

HELLO, BIRDIE—Bobby-soxers Maria Benvenutti, front, and Julie Gooch compare notes on the impending induction of their crooning hero, Conrad Birdie, in the Bay St. Louis Little Theatre's forthcoming production of the musical 'Bye, Bye, Birdie' which opens with an 8 p.m. curtain Friday at the Boardman Street Playhouse. The play continues Saturday and again Thursday through Saturday, Aug. 18-20.

Madden named UM Scholar

Caroline Belle Madden of Bay St. Louis has been awarded a University Scholarship at The University of Mississippi.

The University awards approximately 100 University Scholarships each academic year to entering freshmen and transfer students who are residents of Mississippi.

Ms. Madden, daughter of Nannette P. Stroh, graduated from Bay Senior High School. She was a member of the National Honor Society, the French Club, the yearbook staff and the Bay Waveland Yacht Club. She is also listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Ms. Madden plans to major in accountancy at Ole Miss.

Mississippi Brownbuilder Charles Walker Sr.: One of the best

Charles Walker Sr., from Monticello, is helping build local economic growth and progress as part of Brown & Root's worldwide engineering and construction team.

Charles joined Brown & Root in 1969 as a timekeeper and is now an electrician. He and his wife, Alice, live in Perry County and have four children. Their two sons also work with Brown & Root. An Air Force veteran, Charles enjoys hunting, fishing and woodworking on the weekends.

Another thing about Charles: he's one of the best. He's helping Brown & Root do a better job, because he knows his job and gets it done right.

Open shop, open opportunity

Brownbuilders like Charles share with all of us a feeling of pride in individual contributions to the total success of every project on which we work. Brown & Root's open shop policy means open opportunity for people to do their best. We offer training in valuable skills and reward good work with advancement that's based on the individual's ability and merit. That way we get the best people at every job level.

The community benefits

Through our local offices, we offer employment to a high percentage of community residents. The dollars they earn circulate locally in sales, savings and taxes, benefiting business and government. The additional skills and experience they acquire are lasting community benefits.

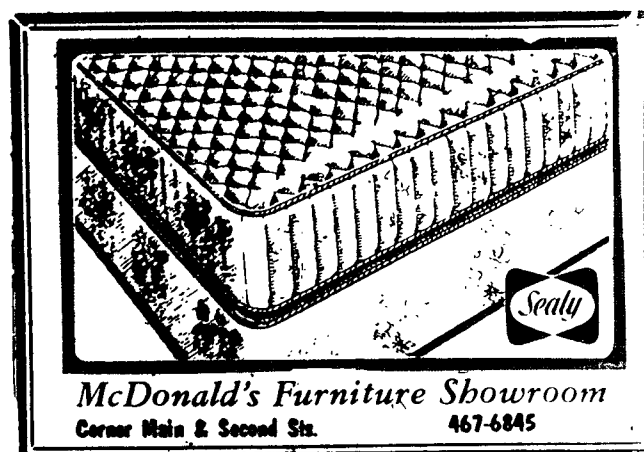

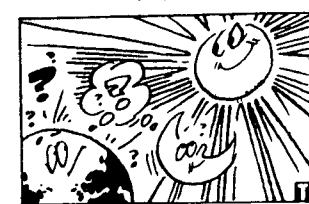

Our standard of quality:
Doing things right the first time.

Canadian teachers seek out USM graduate programs in speech and hearing

Football season has already started back home, but two Canadian teachers are enduring a Mississippi summer to finish up their masters' degrees.

Mike Webb from Belleville and Pat Howse from Toronto, both in Ontario, are teachers of the deaf pursuing master's degrees in speech and hearing at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Webb teaches at the Saganaska School, a demonstration and laboratory school for language disorders. The lab program enrolls about 40 students; teachers from all over the province come for three-to-four-week courses on language disorders in children.

Ms. Howse, a master teacher at George Brown College, heads a program offering support services to 60-70 young adult students at the community college. The services include interpretation, tutoring and individual programs for students unable to integrate into regular classrooms.

Both are at USM because of the trips to Canada by Dr. Etouille DuBard, director of the School for Children with Language Disorders. Dr. DuBard and Maureen Martin have made several trips to the Belleville school for teacher training courses.

Three teachers from the school came to USM for summer courses in 1970. Three other teachers including Webb have taken year-long sabbaticals to study at USM. It was the director of the Saganaska School, Bill McMaster, who convinced Howse to get her degree at USM.

All this international exchange has led to the spread of the Association method, used in the SCLD, into the public school system of Ontario. The method has even jumped the border and the language barrier into Quebec province where a French translation is used.

Webb will return to work in the teacher education program at Saganaska. He can't service all the language disordered children at the school but by training teachers he can extend the methods throughout the province.

This will be helped to a great degree by the school's upcoming affiliation with one of the provincial universities. "This will mean we will have access to the psychology department and other departments of the university," he said.

"I will return to Toronto with the feeling that what I've learned here will help. Often services for the deaf and those with language disorders are fragmented and the interdisciplinary approach taught here will be helpful," said Howse, who will return next summer to complete her clinical hours.

The Canadian parliament is considering a bill that will require school districts to set up services for the handicapped, according to Howse and the experience she gained in language assessment and remediation will also be used part time with an assessment center.

Howse and Webb were both impressed with USM's facilities and the organization of the Department of Speech and Hearing Sciences and they were grateful to the faculty and staff for their assistance.

The SCLD, the model for Belleville program, is funded through the Minimum Foundation of the State Department of Education from September to May. During the summer months funding is supplied through Title I and the Forrest-Lamar County United Way.

This provides for a 11-month program that is important for both the college students in professional training programs and the children with language disorders. The 1983-84 enrollment is expected to be 26 children, who must meet eligibility requirements set by the State Department of Education.

Financial aid still available at Belhaven

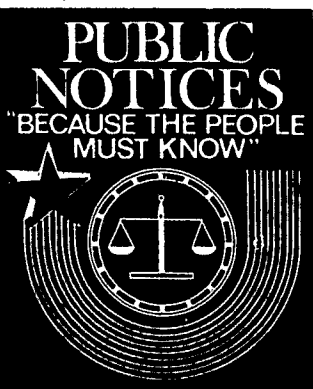

Academic scholarships and other financial aid are still available for students interested in attending Belhaven College this fall.

Although registration is set for Aug. 24 for the fall term, Admissions Director David Misner urges anyone interested in attending college this fall to apply for admission promptly and to inquire about financial aid programs.

"There is money available for all qualified students who want to attend Belhaven," he said. "Belhaven College feels no serious, qualified students should ever be turned away because of financial need."

For admissions information, call 969-7400. The Belhaven College Financial Aid Office is 948-0550.

State's new school attendance law applies to six and seven-year-olds

Mississippi's children aged six and seven who are medically able are required to attend school this fall under the state's new Compulsory Attendance Law.

Parents of children of these ages who are not able to attend because of medical problems must present sufficient documentation such as a physician's statement. Other children aged six and seven must be enrolled in a private, public or parochial school or a home instruction program.

A certificate of enrollment must be filed with the clerk of the youth court in the county of residence by Sept. 15 for all children enrolled in non-public schools and who have attained age six but not age eight on or before Sept. 1. Enrollment certification forms are available in city halls and county courthouses.

Children attending public schools will be accounted for through the school systems.

"All parents who have not enrolled their children or whose children are unlawfully absent will come to the attention of the attendance officers hired throughout the state," said Budd Hughes, executive director of the Governor's Commission for Children and Youth (GCCY).

"The attendance officer will make every effort to help each family in overcoming problems which are hindering the youngster's enrollment in school," he said. "When all attempts fail, the parents will be subject to prosecution."

According to Hughes, a parent, guardian or custodian of a six or seven-year-old child not in compliance with the law is guilty of educational neglect, and if convicted, would be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisoned up to one year or both.

The new law is being implemented on a staggered basis. Each school year after 1983-84 one year of age will be added to the age of pupils required to attend school. In the 1989-90 school year, every child six years of age through 13 will be required to attend school.

"Compulsory school attendance is among several approaches Mississippi is taking to improve the education of our children and youth," said Hughes.

"Governor Winter's 'educational package' which resulted in the Education Reform Act of 1982 has gained national attention for its contribution to better education, he said.

ETV Brief

SCIFI RERUN

"The Horror of It All," a documentary recalling fantasy, science fiction and horror movies from the '20s to the '60s, will be rebroadcast at 8 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 13, on the Mississippi ETV Network. It was first seen on ETV last February.

"If you wonder why there is a continuous preoccupation with horror in motion pictures, there's a reason," said John Carradine, who in his long career has acted in more than 50 horror films. "People love to be scared."

"The Horror of It All" presents Carradine's recollections and insights along with those of others who, through the years, have brought audiences the "pleasure of terror."

Interweaving film clips, stills and posters, "The Horror of It All" also features some of the men and women who were intimately involved in the production of some of the foremost and best-love horror films of the past: actors Dana Andrews, John Carradine, Gloria Stuart, martine Beswick; directors Rouben Mamoulian, Curtis Harrington and Roger Corman; producer Herman Cohen; and writer Robert Bloch.

Featured in film clips are John Barrymore, Lon Chaney, Conrad Veidt, Frederic March, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray, Chester Morris, George Zucco, Vincent Price, Christopher Lee and Peter Cushing.

"In addition to compulsory attendance, the act also mandates immediate implementation of reading improvement programs in the first grade as well as implementation of statewide kindergartens beginning in the fall of 1986, school consolidation for more efficiency, teacher upgrading and better school financing."

Prior to the act's passage, Mississippi was the only state without an enforceable attendance law and state funding for kindergartens.

"For many years, Mississippi has been plagued by serious education deficiencies," said Hughes. "Our state has next to the highest illiteracy rate in the nation, and Mississippi has the second lowest graduation rate for high school students. Our state also has the highest school dropout rate in the nation and the nation's highest military rejection rate.

"A good education is an important investment in a child's future and the future of our state," he said. "We hope that parents will want to have their children get the best education they can, but when this is not the case, the new law will be there to help."
